ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW

Metro Manila is one of Asia's premier regions composed of 16 cities and 1 municipality, with major central business districts in the capital Manila, Makati, Quezon City, Parañaque, Pasay, Muntinlupa and Taguig City with its Bonifacio Global City dubbed the Metro's lifestyle hub.

WHERE TO STAY

Makati: The centrally located financial district but also a cultural and entertainment hub, home to Raffles and Fairmont hotels but catering to a variety of budgets.

Ortigas: Manila's second Central Business District, with two of the city's biggest malls and mainly upscale hotels.

Malate and Ermita: Handy Manila Bay districts just south of Intramuros, with popular attractions, lively nightlife scenes and plenty of options for budget travellers.

Pasay: The closest area to the airport, home to SM Mall of Asia, Baywalk, a vast array of dining and nightlife and a wide choice of accommodation for all budgets.

GETTING TO AND AROUND

Metro Manila, the Capital Region of the Philippines, can be reached through major airlines with direct flights from London's Heathrow Airport in 13hrs. Within the Philippines, Manila is linked to provincial centres by several domestic carriers; Palawan or Cebu from Manila are both about 70mins by air, for instance, while Siargao is about 2hrs 30mins.

Taxis from the airport to Makati or Malate take about 20mins and cost about £4 using a yellow airport metered taxi. Alternatively, there's the Airport Loop shuttle from Terminal 3 to Pasay and Baclaran. It starts as early as 5am and runs until 11pm. Fare one-way is about £0.30.

METRO MANILA

WELCOME TO METRO MANILA

Blending charming Spanish colonial architecture, world-class museums and galleries and the world's oldest Chinatown with some of the biggest and best shopping malls on Earth, the vibrant bay side Filipino capital Manila is also a foodie paradise that was much revered by celebrity chef, author and travel documentarian Anthony Bourdain.

It may be the smallest region in the Philippines but you'll never run out of fun things to discover in the 16 unique cities and one municipality of Metro Manila, also known as the National Capital Region (NCR).

Metro Manila is the country's economic, political and cultural capital. And it's chaotic in the best way possible. From the colourful, roaring jeepneys to the dancing traffic enforcers, to the karaoke machines blasting 80s ballads in the streets, everywhere you go is teeming with life.

There's never a dull moment, especially when you spend it with the fun-loving Manileños.

"A combination of artistic renaissance and economic boom has given the capital of the Philippines a new lease of life, with plenty to see, do and taste."

WHY IT'S MORE FUN IN MANILA

From bamboo-bike tours to artisan shopping, and from contemporary art venues to casinos, the Philippine capital is a world in itself, with something to appeal to all ages and tastes when it comes to things to see and do.

CULTURE AND FOOD

Manila packs a lot of culture into a small space – many of its major sites are in the walled Intramuros, including the Spanish-era Fort Santiago with its shrine-museum to José Rizal, Manila Cathedral, UNESCO-listed San Agustin Church (the Philippines' oldest), Casa Manila museum of Spanish colonial furniture and art, and Rizal Bagumbayan Light and Sound Museum of colonial and modern history. Other venues in which to learn about Filipino history and culture and art are the Bahay Tsinoy museum of Chinese history, Ayala Museum of Filipino history and artifacts, National Museum of Anthropology, Malacañang Palace presidential museum, and National Museum of Fine Arts, while for kids there's the Exploremore science museum, Museo Pambata children's museum and the National Museum of Natural History.

A densely populated city melding many different cultures and influences, Manila is unsurprisingly lively all-year-round, with religious processions, live music, theatre, famous drag shows or plenty of speakeasies and videoke/karaoke bars.

Traditional and new-wave Filipino, Spanish and Chinese fare lead the eclectic dining scene in Manila, but locals are also mad about Japanese food, American diner classics and global food in general – meaning everyone will find something to please and new flavours to experience, all of it stunningly great value. Don't miss seafood made to your taste at a dampa such as Pasay, where you buy ingredients to be cooked at an on-site restaurant.
